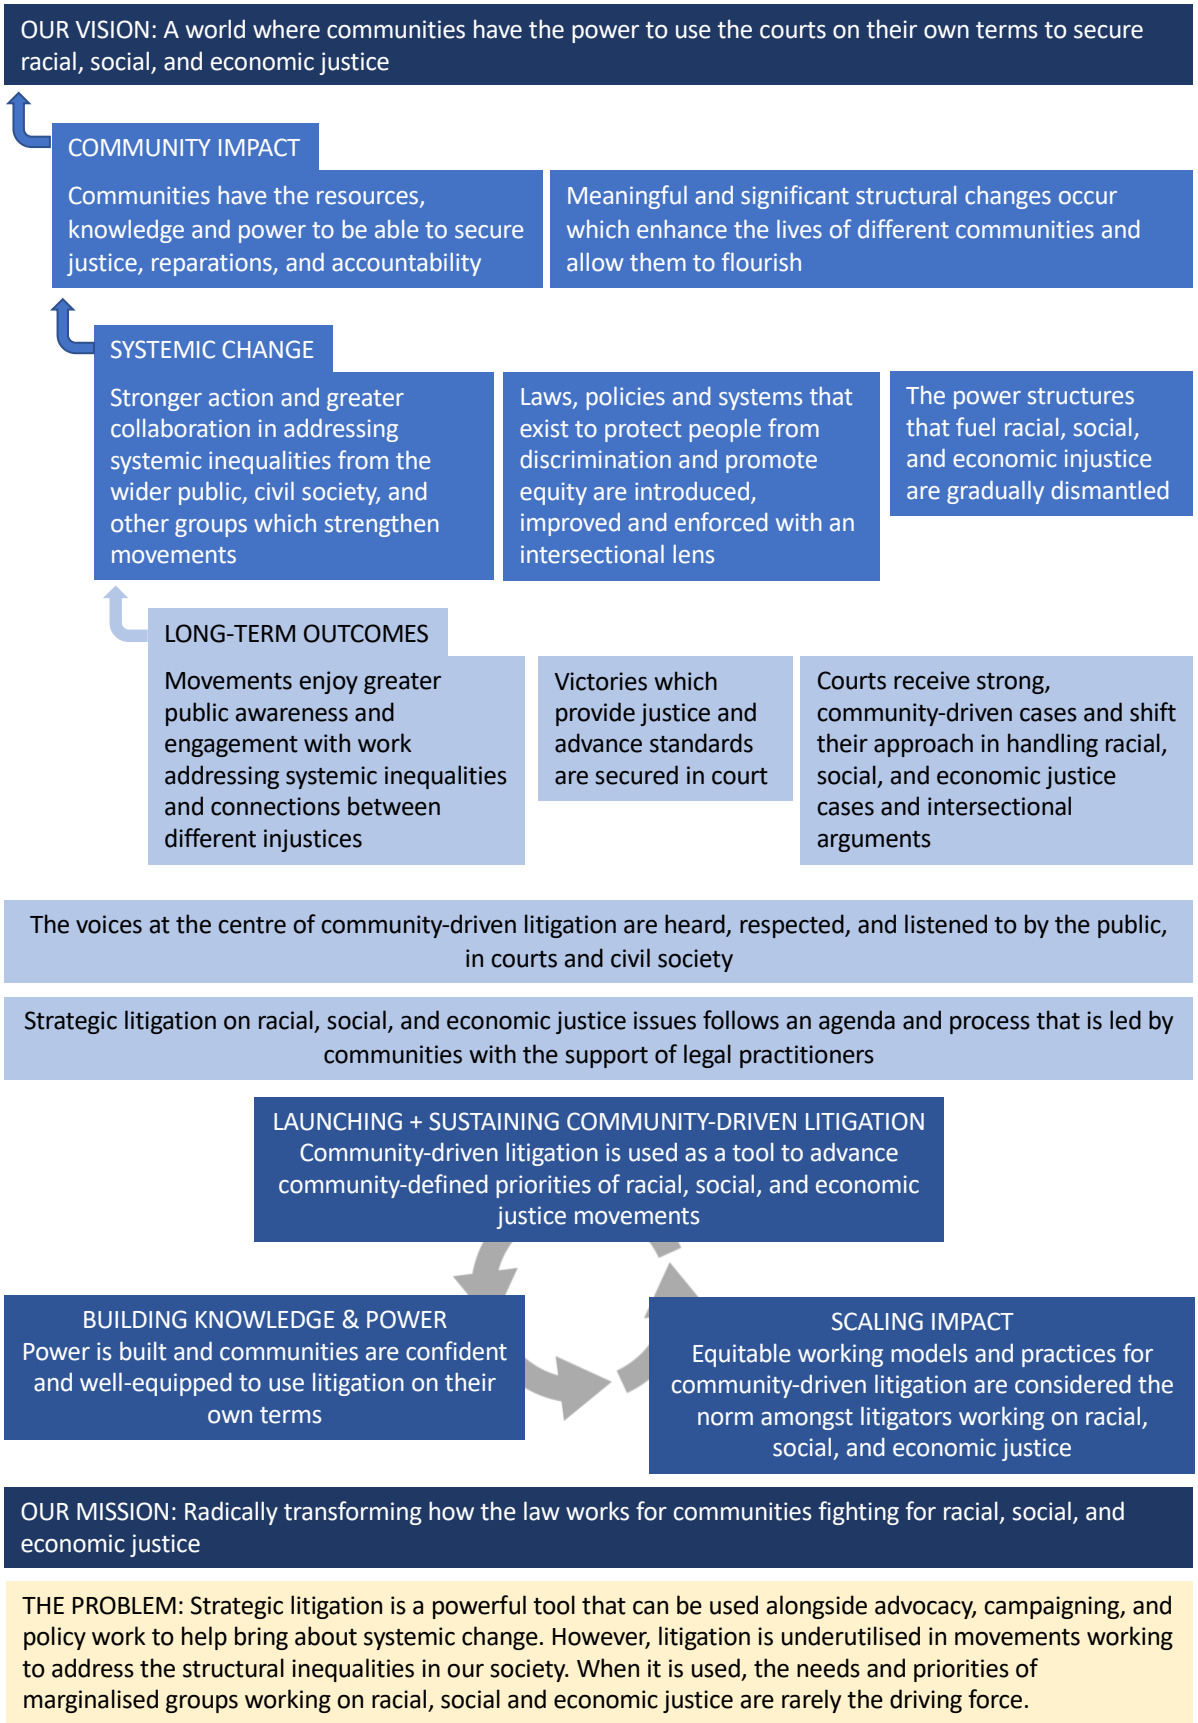
Annex 1: Systemic Justice theory of change



THE PROBLEM: Strategic litigation is a powerful tool that can be used alongside advocacy, campaigning, and policy work to help bring about systemic change. However, litigation is underutilised in movements working to address the structural inequalities in our society. When it is used, the needs and priorities of marginalised groups working on racial, social and economic justice are rarely the driving force.